

Mountain Express, when he was recalled by the whistle of his own train. Experts say the train could not have been stopped in less than 1,500 or 1,700 feet. Murray also disregarded the rule which requires that when a flagman is recalled under such conditions he must leave a lighted fuse on the track which will attract the attention of any engineer passing that point within a certain time.

Engineer Miller has told that he saw the rear-end lights of the Bar Harbor train just as the torpedo exploded under his engine.

There were no other signals in sight, and if there had been he could not have stopped.

Granting that the brakes and other equipment of engine No. 1237, which headed the White Mountain, were in perfect working order, Miller has but 450 feet within which to stop, or less than one-fourth the distance required.

Death Special Brings Victims.
A steady stream of undertakers' wagons rolled up to the Union Station here to-day, and with bowed heads the crowds around the station watched the coffins containing the bodies of seven of the victims of the crash.

The "death special" was the term applied to the special train that was carried to carry away the bodies of the five Philadelphia men who were members of the camping party of S. Crozier Fox. It was accompanied by G. W. Williams, Jr., and a number of relatives of the young people whose lives were snuffed out in the crash.

Immediately preceding the "death special" went a train carrying the bodies of Frank D. Butler and his wife, of Scranton. In the evening another train carried away Mr. and Mrs. Howard E. Martin of Bryn Mawr, Pa., another couple who were killed. The body of William Altschul also went on this train to his home in Norfolk, Va.

The same physicians to-day removed the left thumb from the hand of young Biddle. Both he and Rowland, who are members of the Fox party of campers, are in a serious condition. They are expected to die.

Fireman in Both Weeks.
Springfield, Mass., September 3.—Edward A. Robertson, of West Springfield, had the unusual experience of being a fireman in both of the recent weeks on the New Haven road. He was fireman on the engine of the train that was run into the station on June 12, when six persons were killed and half a score injured, and he was fireman on the engine that ran into the Bar Harbor Express Tuesday at North Haven, when twenty-one were killed and half a hundred injured.

Cyclone On Eastern Shore.
(Special To The Times-Dispatch.)
Cape Charles, Va., September 3.—A genuine Kansas cyclone which swept across this country at 1 o'clock to-day, coming from the ocean, struck the mainland near Oyster, Va., and blazed a trail across the entire county, passing into the bay at Cherrystone.

The track of the cyclone narrowed at times to twenty-five feet. At other times it was 500 feet wide. The Charles Wilson barrel manufacturing plant, at Cherrystone, was the first building destroyed. This building was carried a mile or more and the debris lodged in trees. The loss in damage to buildings is estimated at $10,000. No lives were lost.

Heavy Blow in Danville.
(Special To The Times-Dispatch.)
Danville, Va., September 3.—A fourteen-hour fall of rain, accompanied by a wind which at times assumed the proportion of a hurricane, laid Danville to waste. The loss in damage to buildings is estimated at $10,000. No lives were lost.

North Carolina Storm-Swept.
(Special To The Times-Dispatch.)
Goldsboro, N. C., September 3.—The worst storm in the history of Goldsboro, which made its advent here about midnight last night, broke over the city about 6 o'clock, with a wind of squalls, with rain, with lightning, and with hail. The loss in damage to buildings is estimated at $10,000. No lives were lost.

Alarm of Fire in the midst of the storm was caused by a blaze at the plant of the Biluthic Street Paving Company, but work of the firemen prevented serious damage.

It is reported that serious damage has resulted all over the county. Up to a late hour to-night the passenger train from New York had not arrived, and the train that left here this morning over the Norfolk-Southern for Beaufort, did not go beyond Newbern, doubling back from that city.

People coming in on that train brought news that the storm has been terrific, and had cut off by all telegraph and telephone connections. The county bridge at Newbern, it was stated, had been lifted by the high water and rammed against the Norfolk-Southern bridge, so that no train has been operated over it since.

An engineer bringing a freight train from Newbern to this city arrived here at 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He stated that another bridge had been washed away, and the city of Newbern was under four feet of water when he left with his engine for Goldsboro.

Missouri's Governor Shows His Arkansas Neighbors How to Build Good Roads.

Little Rock, Ark., September 3.—Business was forgotten in Arkansas to-day while the people worked the roads. It was the first of two "Good Roads" days proclaimed by Governor George W. Hayes, and it was a success. Everywhere citizens wielded the shovel and pick, and the banks put in as long hours and worked just as hard as the hired laborers. As a result, hundreds of miles of the State's highways are in better shape to-night than ever before. To-morrow will be a repetition of to-day, it is believed.

Governor Major, of Missouri, who came to Arkansas to give "an exhibition of plain and fancy shoveling," put in a good day's work. So did Governor Hayes. The two Governors, in the regulation overalls, were members of a "gang" assigned to a stretch of road-way near Little Rock. Mayor Taylor, of Little Rock, was among their fellow-workers.

The day was hot, the mercury climbing close to 90 degrees. The Mayor, except in several counties, where the roads are so hard because of lack of the moisture that it was deemed inadvisable to work them now, the day was observed all over the State. In hundreds of towns every place of business was closed.

The women of Arkansas also did their part to make the day a success. Generally their task was to provide the dinner pail, but at Fourche Dam, near Little Rock, twenty worked beside the men. The leader of the little gang, a woman more than eighty years old, promised to have her workers on hand again to-morrow.

ESCAPES DEATH IN FALL

Judge Spellman Not Fatally Injured When Aeroplane Drops 400 Feet.

Rutland, Vt., September 3.—Judge J. David Spellman was a passenger with Aviator Grover Schmidt when the latter's aeroplane plunged to earth at the Rutland Fair yesterday, killing the pilot. He is practically assured of recovery, physicians at the Rutland Hospital said to-day. Although Judge Spellman was caught in the machine just as Schmidt was miraculously thrown out of a broken bow after the 400-foot drop, Schmidt's mother received when his clothing caught fire were his principal injuries.

Young Schmidt, who, although only twenty-one years old, had been flying five years, had promised his mother that he would give up flying September 4, his birthday. Both his mother and father saw him fall to his death.

HALDANE ADDRESS IS OFFICIAL WORD

Means for England and America to Take the Lead for World's Peace.

Philadelphia, September 3.—Lord Haldane's address before the American Bar Association at Montreal, in which he suggested that the United States, Great Britain and Canada should work together in the interests of world peace, was really an official announcement of the policy of the British government, according to Francis Rawle, of this city. Mr. Rawle was chairman of the committee that met Lord Haldane on his arrival in New York last week. He declared that the lord chancellor before sailing on his return to England authorized him to make the announcement of the official character of his address, bespeaking an alliance with the United States to bring about world peace.

According to Mr. Rawle, Lord Haldane said, speaking of his address: "It is official and intended to be so. It is the declared policy of the British government, announced through my address to the world."

"It will be published in London before I get home, and it will be published immediately in French, German, Russian and Chinese."

Mr. Rawle declared that Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign minister, and read the address before Lord Haldane started for America gave it his cordial approval.

the matter under more mature advisement.

To Audit Accounts.

Judge Monroe approved the recommendation of the receivers that the American Audit Company be employed to prepare immediately a full inventory and statement of the bank's affairs. The cost of this work will be between $500 and $600.

The receivers reported that between $500 and $600 due by the bank to its employees in salaries for the last half of August. The men, it is stated, stand in immediate need of the money. In the absence of any provision according to the terms of the receivers' pending instructions from the court, Judge Monroe took the matter under advisement.

For the increased convenience to the transaction of business the receivers have abandoned the plan to keep the Church Hill and Fulton branches open. All business concerning the main bank as well as the branches will be transacted at the central bank on Ninth Street. The arrangement was approved yesterday by Judge Monroe.

Many Renew Notes.

Since assuming charge of the bank, the receivers have renewed many of the obligations held by the bank have matured—a large number of them on August 20. Exercising their judgment, the receivers informed the court that they had accepted a number of curtailments and renewals.

Ruling on this point the court directs the receivers to use their discretion in renewing notes which may be discounted by the bank, as it matures, but to secure reasonable curtailments on such obligations wherever it is practical.
